WHAT THIS BILL MEANS TO LAW ENFORCEMENT

This bill takes aim at the growing incidence of individuals sending unsolicited, sexually explicit images and videos to others. This practice, sometimes referred to as “cyber flashing,” can happen on social media, dating applications, or even through an unprotected AirDrop between cell phones. Although there are no boundaries on who is targeted with such images, the most common recipients of such unwanted images are young women.

WHAT THIS BILL MEANS TO LAW ENFORCEMENT

(As provided by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department):

Penal Code section 653.22 allows our patrol functions to enforce this section, and there are of course way more patrol officers than there are undercover officers available for extensive operations.

- Defines “identifiable” through cross-reference to the definition that currently exists in the Penal Code section, which provides that the term means “capable of identification, or capable of being recognized, meaning that someone, including the victim, could identify or recognize the victim. It does not require the victim’s identity to actually be established.”

  - No law enforcement agency or agent thereof may compare any of these samples or profiles with DNA samples or profiles that do not relate to the incident being investigated
  - No law enforcement agency or agent thereof may include any of these DNA profiles in any database that allows these samples to be compared to or matched with profiles derived from DNA evidence obtained from crime scenes.

This includes, but it is not limited to, public or private DNA testing facilities.
- A “victim” or “witness” does not include any person who is a target of the investigation of the incident being investigated, if law enforcement agents have probable cause to believe that person has committed a public offense relating to the incident under investigation.
- A sample is “voluntarily provided for the purpose of exclusion” if law enforcement agents do not consider the individual to be a suspect and have requested a voluntary DNA sample in order to exclude the person’s DNA profile from consideration in the current investigations.

WHAT THIS BILL MEANS TO LAW ENFORCEMENT

Limiting what DNA samples members of law enforcement are permitted to run through their databases would prove damaging to investigations.

AB 1594 (Ting)- Firearms: civil suits

Civil Code Section 3273.50 (Add)

Effective Date: July 1, 2023

SUMMARY:

Establishes the “firearm industry standard of conduct,” which places a series of requirements on industry members and prohibits specified practices.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- Defines a “firearm industry member” to include a person, firm, corporation, company, partnership, society, joint stock company, or any other entity or association engaged in the manufacture, distribution, importation, marketing, wholesale, or retail sale of firearm-related products.
- Defines a “firearm-related product” as a firearm, ammunition, a firearm precursor part, a firearm component, or a firearm accessory with a connection to California, as specified.
- Requires a member to establish, implement, and enforce reasonable controls and to take reasonable precautions to ensure it does not sell, distribute, or provide a firearm-related product to a downstream distributor or retailer who fails to do establish reasonable controls.
- Defines “reasonable controls” to mean reasonable procedures, acts, or practices that are designed, implemented, and enforced to prevent certain sales, loss, or theft and to ensure the member follows applicable laws.
- Provides that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that the firearm industry member failed to implement reasonable controls if the member’s action or failure to act created a reasonably foreseeable risk that the harm alleged by the claimant would occur and the member could have established, implemented, and enforced reasonable controls to prevent or substantially mitigate the risk that the harm would occur. If established, the member has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that it established, implemented, and enforced reasonable controls.
- Provides that a firearm industry member shall not manufacture, market, import, offer for wholesale sale, or offer for retail sale a firearm-related product that is abnormally dangerous and likely to create an unreasonable risk of harm to public health and safety in California. A product is not in violation based on a firearm’s inherent capacity to cause injury or lethal harm.
- Establishes a presumption that a firearm-related product is abnormally dangerous and likely to create an unreasonable risk of harm to public health and safety if the product:

- Has features that render the product most suitable for assaultive purposes instead of lawful self-defense, hunting, or other legitimate sport and recreational activities;
  - Is designed, sold, or marketed in a manner that foreseeably promotes conversion of legal firearm-related products into illegal products; or
  - Is designed, sold, or marketed in a manner that is targeted at minors or other individuals who are legally prohibited from accessing firearms.
- Prohibits a firearm industry member from engaging in any conduct related to the sale or marketing of firearm-related products that is in violation of the False Advertising Law, Business and Professions Code Section 17500 et seq., the Unfair Competition Law, Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq., and the Consumers Legal Remedies Act.
  - Authorizes the Attorney General, a city attorney, a county counsel, or a person who has suffered harm in California to bring a civil action against a firearm industry member in violation of the firearm industry standard of conduct laid out above.
  - Authorizes a court to award injunctive relief sufficient to prevent the firearm industry member and any other defendant from further violating the law, damages, attorney's fees and costs, and other appropriate relief.
  - Provides that an intervening act by a third party, including, but not limited to, criminal misuse of a firearm-related product, shall not preclude a firearm industry member from liability under this bill.

Various Code Sections

Effective Date: June 30, 2022

SUMMARY:

Redefines one of the definitions of "firearm" as including a precursor part, redefines "firearm precursor part" and prohibits a person from possessing or manufacturing a firearm precursor part without authorization.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- Redefines a firearm precursor part as any forging, casting, printing, extrusion, machined body or similar article that has reached a stage in manufacture where it may readily be completed, assembled or converted to be used as the frame or receiver of a functional firearm, or that is marketed or sold to the public to become or be used as the frame or receiver of a functional firearm once completed, assembled or converted.
- Extends the definition of a firearm to include a firearm precursor part for the purposes of most criminal and regulatory provisions related to the possession, sale, and transfer of a firearm, including provisions which do not apply to a frame or receiver under existing law.
- Repeals provisions relating to the sale of firearm precursor parts through a licensed precursor part vendor, and would prohibit the sale, transfer, or possession of an unserialized firearm precursor part, except as specified.
- Creates a process by which a person may apply to the department for a determination that a particular item or kit is or is not a firearm precursor part.
- Existing law requires a person that is manufacturing a firearm or assembling a firearm from unserialized components, to apply to the Department of Justice for a unique mark of identification and to affix that mark to the firearm, as specified.
- This bill:
  - Requires any person in possession of an unserialized firearm to apply to the department for a unique mark of identification and to affix that mark to the firearm before January 1, 2024.
  - Commencing on January 1, 2024, explicitly prohibits the possession or transfer of a firearm without a serial number or mark of identification.

- Existing law prohibits a person from purchasing more than one handgun or semiautomatic centerfire rifle in a 30-day period.
- This bill:
  - Commencing on January 1, 2024, also apply this limitation to completed frames or receivers and firearm precursor parts.
- Existing law prohibits a person convicted of a felony from possessing a firearm.

- This bill:
  - Includes in the 10-year prohibition, a misdemeanor violation of manufacturing an unserialized firearm, or aiding or abetting the manufacture of a firearm by a prohibited person, that occurs on or after January 1, 2023.
  - Authorizes the Department of Justice to adopt regulations to carry out its provisions. The bill would make other conforming, technical, and nonsubstantive changes. By creating new crimes expanding the application of numerous crimes, this bill would impose a state-mandated local program.
  - Declares its provisions to be severable and would authorize the Department of Justice, if any provisions of this bill are held invalid, to enact regulations in furtherance of the bill purpose, including, without limitation, requiring a person to obtain a license to purchase or receive a firearm precursor part.

SB 1209 (Eggman)- Sentencing: members of military: trauma

Penal Code Section 1170.91 (Amend)

Effective Date: January 1, 2023

SUMMARY:

Expands the ability of defendants who suffered from military related trauma to petition for recall and resentencing regardless of whether the sentence was imposed prior to January 1, 2015 or whether the defendant was sentenced to an indeterminate (life) sentence, but exempts persons who have been convicted of specified violent offenses (super strikes) and registerable sex offenses.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- Authorizes a defendant who suffered military related trauma to file a petition for recall of a sentence and resentencing without regard to when the defendant was sentenced, thereby deleting the requirement that the person have been sentenced prior to January 1, 2015.
- If the person satisfies the resentencing criteria, the court may, in the interest of justice and regardless of whether the original sentence was imposed after a trial or plea agreement, do the following:
  - Reduce the defendant's term of imprisonment by modifying the sentence; or
  - Vacate the defendant's conviction and impose judgment on any necessarily included lesser offense or lesser related offense, whether or not that offense was charged in the original pleading, and then resentence the defendant to a reduced term of imprisonment, with the concurrence of both the defendant and the district attorney of the county in which the defendant was sentenced or the Attorney General if the case was originally prosecuted by the Department of Justice (DOJ).
- Expands the existing resentencing provision to apply to persons sentenced to indeterminate sentences.
- Specifies special considerations of military service-related trauma in sentencing and resentencing do not apply to a person who has a prior conviction for an offense requiring sex offender registration or for a "super strike" offense.

CASE LAW

FOURTH AMENDMENT: REASONABLE SUSPICION FOR TRAFFIC STOP

1. People v. Holiman (2022) 76 Cal.App.5th 825: Can an officer stop a vehicle for the failure to activate a turn signal before stopping at a stop sign?

RULE: The failure to signal continuously for the last 100 feet before a limit line is not a distinct traffic offense. It must be linked to the requirement that another vehicle is affected by the unsignaled movement.

2. FACTS: An officer began following a car due to hunch about a “furtive look” the driver gave her. The driver came to a full stop at a three-way intersection, signaled a right turn, and then turned right. Based on this, officer conducted a traffic stop and found contraband. Def. moved to suppress the evidence.

3. HELD: The stop was unlawful. The failure to signal is a traffic offense (Veh. Code §§ 22107, 22108) if another vehicle could have been affected by the non-signaling vehicle’s movement. Here, the officer’s car was the other vehicle, and def.’s use of right-turn signal after the stop—as opposed to before—could not possibly have affected the safety of the officer’s car. Thus, there was no reasonable suspicion that a traffic violation had occurred.

FOURTH AMENDMENT: PAT-SEARCH FOR WEAPONS DURING TRAFFIC STOP

1. People v. Pantoja (2022) 77 Cal.App.5th 483: Can an officer pat-search a suspect for weapons during a traffic stop because he is wearing baggy clothes in the winter, the officer knows he had a history of arrests for weapons crimes, and the area is known for high crime?

RULE: There is no reasonable suspicion justifying a pat-search because a suspect is wearing baggy clothes, is stopped in a high crime area, and the officer remembers that the suspect has a violent criminal history.

2. FACTS: An officer conducted a lawful traffic stop for a broken tail light and broken license plate light. Def. declined to consent to a search. The officer conducted a pat-search because def. was wearing baggy clothes with “bulges,” and the officer knew that the suspect had a prior “history of violence and weapons possession.” Officer found a loaded gun. Def. moved to suppress.

3. HELD: The pat-search was unlawful. A pat-search must be based on reasonable suspicion that the suspect is armed. (But this is the incorrect legal standard, see NOTE below.) Def.’s baggy clothes did not justify this, given that the weather was cold and the clothes were appropriate. Def. made no suspicious statements or movements or attempts to hide a weapon. Nor did the officer’s memory that def. had prior arrests or convictions for weapons offenses justify the search. The offenses were years old, and the officer had no recent information or reason to believe def. was still violent or armed. Lastly, that it was a high-crime neighborhood, by itself, did not justify the pat down, particularly since def. was pulling into his own apartment.

NOTE: This is a troubling decision that is not aligned with controlling law. The ruling is based on decisions from lower federal courts, which do not control questions under the Fourth Amendment in California. It also relies on law addressing reasonable suspicion for a lawful detention, rather than the articulable facts needed to justify a pat-search after a driver is lawfully detained.

FOURTH AMENDMENT: UNLAWFULLY PROLONGED TRAFFIC STOP

1. People v. Ayon (2022) 80 Cal.App.5th 926: Was a traffic stop unlawfully prolonged where officers did not investigate the traffic infractions and did not write a ticket while they waited for a narcotics dog to alert to the presence of drugs?

RULE: A traffic stop cannot last longer than is necessary to effectuate its purpose.

2. FACTS: After police saw def. commit two minor traffic violations, they conducted a traffic stop. Within the first four minutes of the stop, officers had gathered def.'s identification and completed the necessary records checks, but did not do anything else to investigate the traffic infractions, and no one wrote a ticket. When the def. refused to consent to a search of his vehicle, the officers requested assistance from a narcotics dog. The dog arrived at the scene about 13 minutes after the traffic stop began and alerted to the presence of drugs six minutes later. The police searched the car and found cocaine, methamphetamine, currency, and a scale. After the search, the def. asked about the traffic violations and the officer told him that his intent when initiating a traffic stop was not to issue tickets, but to uncover evidence of other crimes.

3. HELD: The search violated the Fourth Amendment because the traffic stop was unduly prolonged. Officers did not diligently pursue an investigation of the traffic infractions during the time they were waiting for the narcotics dog to arrive and while the dog was working prior to alerting.

NOTE: The court mentioned that the body camera videos were crucial to its decision. Without the videos—which undermined the officer's claim that the def. was hostile or intoxicated—"the outcome of the case likely would have been different."

FOURTH AMENDMENT: PROBABLE CAUSE FOR VEHICLE SEARCH BASED ON ODOR OF MARIJUANA; VEHICLE IMPOUND AND INVENTORY

3. Blakes v. Superior Court (2021) 72 Cal.App.5th 904: When does the smell of marijuana provide probable cause to search a vehicle? Does driving on a suspended license permit a vehicle impound and inventory?

RULE: Just the smell of burnt marijuana during a traffic stop without facts pointing to driving under the influence or driving with an open container does not permit a search of a car. A vehicle impound must be based on “community caretaking,” and a stated desire to further investigate def. and search for evidence of criminal activity invalidates a vehicle inventory.

2. FACTS: Def. was driving with illegally tinted windows on a suspended license. He did not immediately stop when officers tried to pull him over. Officers smelled burnt marijuana coming from the car, but could not tell if it was freshly burned. They decided to tow the car because it was common to tow the vehicle of someone driving on a suspended license and because the officers believed “something else was going on.” The officers searched the car, both because they believed the smell of marijuana gave them probable cause to do so, and to conduct an inventory prior to the impound. The search revealed a gun and indicia of drug sales.

3. HELD: The odor of burnt marijuana alone, without any facts of driving under the influence or driving with an open container, did not provide probable cause that the car contained contraband or evidence of illegal activity. Nor was there probable cause based on the tinted windows, the fact that the car did not pull over immediately, driving on a suspended license, or the driver’s prior arrest for being a felon in possession of a firearm. Driving on a suspended license was not valid community caretaking rationale to impound the vehicle. The decision to impound was a pretext to conduct an investigative search.

FOURTH AMENDMENT: WARRANTLESS BLOOD DRAW BASED ON EXIGENCY

1. People v. Nault* (2021) 72 Cal.App.5th 1144: Can officers order a blood draw to test for alcohol content when a suspect is unconscious following an auto accident?

RULE: Officers can order a blood draw without a search warrant when the suspect is unconscious and injured and cannot be asked to consent to a breath test.

2. FACTS: Def. tried to pass a truck on a highway and crashed into oncoming traffic, killing the driver of another car. Initially semi-conscious, def. admitted to the officer that he had been drinking; his pants were soaked with alcohol and he smelled of alcohol. After being transported by emergency medical helicopter, and with def. no longer responsive, an officer told medical staff to draw his blood for alcohol testing before taking him into surgery.

3. HELD: The general rule is that search warrants are required for blood draws. But the rule does not apply in exigent or emergency circumstances. The severity of def.'s injuries, the extreme medical intervention needed, and the impossibility of requesting a breath test because of it, qualified as exigent circumstances permitting a warrantless blood draw.

FOURTH AMENDMENT: SEARCH WARRANTS

1. People v. Delgado (2022) 78 Cal.App.5th 425: Did an affidavit in support of a search warrant application set forth sufficient information to establish probable cause?

RULE: Probable cause is a flexible standard that permits the magistrate to make commonsense judgments and inferences about human behavior.

2. FACTS: The affidavit in support of a search warrant detailed the officer's investigative experience, specifically his experience investigating gangs. It provided background information about Highland Park (HP), a criminal street gang known to traffic drugs and guns and commit violent crimes. It explained that HP members had committed more than two dozen violent crimes in the six months immediately preceding the warrant application. Def. was an active HP member and his home was a well-documented gang hangout. According to the affidavit, while surveilling def.'s home, officers saw an SUV stop in front of his house. Two men (one of whom was an HP member) got out of the SUV and went inside the house for three to five minutes while the driver waited in the car. The two men returned to the car, and then def. emerged from his house for a brief huddle with the men in the SUV before they drove away. Shortly thereafter, officers stopped the SUV. They found two guns and half a pound of drugs. Nearly all of the drugs were found in the pockets of one of the men who had gone into def.'s house. Based on these facts, the officers sought a warrant to search def.'s home.

3. HELD: Probable cause supported issuance of the search warrant. In reviewing a warrant application, a magistrate "must make a practical and commonsense decision about whether the affidavit shows a fair probability police will find contraband or evidence of a crime at a particular place." Here, the affidavit provided reasonable support for an inference police had witnessed a transfer of illegal contraband from def.'s home to the SUV. In context, the brevity and sequence of this in-person encounter was suspicious because it was more consistent with a pickup or drop-off, and that suspicion was further supported by the discovery of the drugs in the pockets of one of the men who had just been inside the home. Given this, that the house was "a busy gang hangout," and the other information about the gang's recent criminal activities, there was probable cause to search the home for guns, drugs, and other evidence of gang-related crime.

FOURTH AMENDMENT: SEARCH WARRANTS

1. People v. Rowland (2022) 82 Cal.App.5th 1099: Did probable cause support the issuance of a search warrant seeking evidence of possession of child pornography?

RULE: (1) Information provided by an unbiased citizen informant does not need to be corroborated for it to constitute probable cause, even if the citizen’s identity is unknown. (2) A magistrate can rely on an affiant’s expertise when determining probable cause. (3) Whether information in affidavit is stale depends on the circumstances of the alleged offense and the continuing likelihood of uncovering the evidence sought.

2. FACTS: The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) received two anonymous “cybertips” from a Microsoft Online Operation employee about pictures the employee viewed that appeared to be child pornography. The reports to NCMEC indicated the two photos were uploaded on two different days, two weeks apart. They were uploaded from the same IP address using the BingImage application, a Microsoft product. NCMEC relayed the information to local authorities, and the police initiated an investigation. Investigators viewed the images and confirmed both appeared to be child pornography. Through the Child Victim Identification Program (CVIP), they identified the child depicted in the first picture and confirmed the child was underage at the time the photo was taken. Through a separate warrant, officers learned the IP address was registered to def.’s residence. Four months after the images were uploaded to the internet, officers sought a search warrant for def.’s home and car. The affidavit detailed the information in the NCMEC “cybertips” and the information learned in the subsequent investigation. The affiant also detailed his training and experience in investigating child exploitation crimes. Specifically, he noted that suspects with an interest in child pornography tend to collect the images and videos and are unlikely to destroy them. The affiant described the images and his opinion that they were child pornography but did not include the pictures themselves.

3. HELD: (1) Based on all of the circumstances, the magistrate reasonably concluded that the “cybertips” came from an unbiased citizen informant who could be presumed reliable and no independent corroboration was required. (2) The magistrate was not required to personally view the images and properly relied on the affiant’s description of the images and his expert assessment that the images were child pornography. (3) Despite the four months between the uploads of the images and execution of the warrant, the information was not stale because of the ability to recover digital files and the tendency of suspects interested in child pornography to retain such images.

FIFTH AMENDMENT: SUSPECT’S RE-INITIATION OF CONTACT AFTER MIRANDA VIOLATION AND SUBSEQUENT MIRANDA WAIVER

1. People v. Johnson (2022) 12 Cal.5th 544: After an officer violates Miranda by repeatedly questioning a suspect who has invoked his rights, does the violation cast doubt on whether the suspect voluntarily reinitiated contact and validly waived his Miranda rights a short while later? When does an interview with a prosecution-hired psychiatrist constitute an interrogation?

RULE: An officer must stop questioning a suspect when he invokes his Miranda rights. If he does not, the suspect’s statements will be suppressed. However, after such a violation occurs, the suspect may later voluntarily reinitiate contact with police and waive his Miranda rights. The suspect’s subsequent statements are admissible only if there is a clear record that the earlier violations did not coerce him into making the later waiver. A psychiatric interview is an interrogation if the interview elicits material to be used by the prosecution.

2. FACTS: Def. kidnapped and sexually assaulted his estranged wife. When police responded to a 911 call, def. shot and killed an officer. At the hospital after his arrest, while being treated for a gunshot wound, a detective Mirandized def. and asked if he wished to talk; he said no. Over the next three hours, the detective and a prosecutor asked def. whether he wanted to talk; he repeatedly invoked his right to silence and right to counsel. An hour later, at another hospital, a different prosecutor (who did not know def. had invoked his Miranda rights) gave a psychiatrist a tape recorder and a Miranda advisement card to evaluate def.’s mental state. He told the psychiatrist to give def. Miranda warnings and see whether def. would talk to him. The psychiatrist gave partial Miranda advisements. Def. declined to talk and asked for a lawyer. Shortly thereafter, def. asked the psychiatrist, “You wanna talk about it?” He then made incriminating statements. While they spoke, medical staff performed procedures on def., including prepping him for chest tube insertion, drawing blood, administering local anesthesia, and inserting a chest tube.

3. HELD: Officers violated Miranda and Edwards v. Arizona (1981) 451 U.S. 477 by repeatedly questioning def. after he invoked his right to silence and right to counsel. Def.’s statements in the final interview with the psychiatrist, however, were voluntary and admissible.

(1) The initial interview attempts violated Miranda and Edwards. Officers sought to talk to def. five times in three hours, he invoked his right to counsel twice and invoked his right to silence each time. Officers did not wait long enough before asking if def. had changed his mind. Sending in a psychiatrist to see whether def. would talk did not excuse the conduct because one of his tasks was to elicit incriminating information.

(2) Def. reinitiated contact with the psychiatrist voluntarily. The earlier Miranda violations were not so serious that they wore down def.’s will. Def.’s ultimate choice to engage with the psychiatrist was not coerced. Def. specifically said he knew that he was providing potentially incriminating information by talking.

(3) When def. spoke to the psychiatrist, he validly and knowingly waived Miranda. The psychiatrist mainly listened while def. did most of the talking. Def. was coherent and intelligent and his comments reflected his knowledge of Miranda and the charges he was facing. Still, because def. did not explicitly say he was revoking his earlier Miranda invocation, this was “a close case.” It was crucial to the Court’s decision that the officer gave def. a complete Miranda advisement shortly before the psychiatrist gave the partial advisement.

Note: The California Supreme Court repeatedly mentioned how useful it was to have a full audio recording of all the interactions between law enforcement and the def. It is unlikely that the prosecution would have prevailed here had there been gaps in the recording.

FIFTH AMENDMENT: IMPROPER INTERROGATION TACTICS

1. People v. Jimenez (2021) 73 Cal.App.5th 862: Under what circumstances does a detective's threat to charge a suspect's family member render a confession involuntary?

RULE: Threatening to charge a suspect's teenage sons with murder unless he confessed, when the detective knew there was no probable cause to arrest them for murder, was improper and resulted in an involuntary confession.

2. FACTS: A deputy saw three men near trash cans in a field. The deputy thought they had engaged in illegal dumping and, when they drove away, tried to conduct a traffic stop. Def. led the deputy on a chase, during which he let his two teenage sons out of the car. He was eventually apprehended. Deputies found a dead body in one of the trash cans.

During an interview, the detective said he would have to charge def.'s sons with murder if def. did not confess, even though the detective knew that "they had nothing to do with this. . . ." He also said that he wanted "to try to help . . . your boys . . . so we don't have to make them criminals." After that, def. confessed to killing the victim. At trial, def. testified that he found a trash can in front of his house, saw a body inside, and tried to dispose of it. He claimed that he had given a false confession because the detective had threatened to charge his sons with murder.

3. HELD: When the detective told def. that, if def. did not talk him, def.'s sons would be charged with murder, even though the detective knew they were not involved, it was an improper coercive tactic that resulted in an involuntary confession. The only reasonable interpretation of the detective's statements is that he knew def.'s sons were not involved in the killing, but he intended to charge them with murder unless def. confessed. There was a clear causal connection between the threat and the confession: def. did not incriminate himself before the threat and immediately confessed after the threat.

FIFTH AMENDMENT: INVOCATION OF RIGHT TO SILENCE; MIRANDA WAIVER; INTERROGATION TECHNIQUES

1. People v. Ramirez (2022) 73 Cal.App.5th 862: When does a suspect invoke his right to silence? Is a Miranda waiver valid if the most recent admonishment was incomplete? Does a detective improperly pressure a suspect to confess involuntarily by saying that being honest might lead to a better sentence?

RULE: A suspect does not invoke his right to silence if a reasonable officer would think that the suspect only might be invoking the right. A Miranda advisement is unnecessary where the later interrogation is “reasonably contemporaneous” with a prior knowing and intelligent waiver. An officer may urge a suspect to tell the truth and point out the benefits that might naturally flow from a truthful confession.

2. FACTS: Def. committed scores of crimes—including carjacking, kidnapping, and murder—on three separate occasions. After his arrest in Texas, he was Mirandized, waived his rights, and during a long interview, claimed he had not been in California at the time of the crimes and denied involvement in response to repeatedly being accused of lying. At the end of the interview, the officers said they would let him “rethink everything” while they completed paperwork, and he could choose to talk to them again before they left Texas. Def. responded, “I don’t have nothing else to say to you guys.” Five days later, the officers returned to extradite def. to California. An officer gave him complete Miranda advisements again while they drove to the airport. Def. indicated that he understood his rights. The trip to California took about eight hours. They did not question him about the crimes during this period. Once in California, def. asked what would happen with the charges. The officer reminded def. of the previous Miranda admonition but did not reread the complete admonition from a card. Def. then waived his rights. The officers urged him to explain his role in the shooting and said that his truthfulness might have an impact on sentencing: “[T]he person who didn’t pull the trigger is going to be equally guilty to a certain extent but sometimes the truth may make a difference. I don’t know. It may not.” The sergeant invited def. to “start doing something right for a change and what’s right is the truth.” Def. confessed.

3. HELD: Def.’s statement was properly admitted. Viewed in context, a reasonable officer would have understood his statement—“I don’t have nothing else to say to you guys”—to mean he had nothing to add to his claims of innocence, not that he was invoking his right to silence. Def.’s Miranda waiver was valid, and a complete advisement was unnecessary. In the five days before his Miranda waiver and confession, officers gave def. three complete Miranda advisements and a partial (but correct) one. There were no facts suggesting that def. was unaware of his rights or the significance of his waiver. Def.’s statement was voluntary. The following interview techniques were proper: urging def. to tell the truth and pointing out the sentencing benefit that might result from a truthful confession; and focusing on the emotional benefit def. would gain by taking responsibility for his actions.

FIFTH AMENDMENT: INTERROGATION TECHNIQUES

1. People v. Zabelle (2022) 80 Cal.App.5th 1098: Does an officer improperly pressure a suspect to confess by saying that being honest might lead to a better sentence?

RULE: An officer may urge a suspect to tell the truth and point out the benefits that might naturally flow from a truthful confession.

2. FACTS: Def. was recorded on video surveillance committing a robbery. Officers stopped him and gave him Miranda advisements. After denying his involvement, the officer told def., “there is a very critical time where you can earn possibly some consideration,” “we can’t make any guarantees but sometimes being honest and up front, admitting your involvement . . . can go a [ ]ways to showing your remorse,” and, “sometimes that works in your favor.” Def. then confessed.

3. HELD: Def.’s statement was voluntary and properly admitted. The officer’s statements were not implied promises of leniency but discussed the “truthful” effects of being honest.
